FINANCING FOR DEVELOPMENT

The International Conference on Financing for Development will be held in Mexico in the first quarter of 2002 at the highest political level, including at the Summit level. The conference will consider national, international and systemic issues relating to financing for development in a holistic manner in the context of globalisation and interdependence. The conference will provide an historic opportunity to address development through the perspective of finance, as well as the mobilization of financial resources for the full implementation of the action plans agreed to at major United Nations conferences of the 1990s. It is an initiative promoted by the United Nations in collaboration with the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund (IMF), and the World Trade Organization (WTO), to find innovative ways to address the many issues affecting the financing of development.

DAW

Grounded in the vision of equality of the United Nations Charter, the Division for the Advancement of Women (DAW), as part of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs (DESA) of the United Nations Secretariat, advocates the improvement of the status of the women of the world and the achievement of their equality with men. It aims to ensure the participation of women as equal partners with men in all aspects of human endeavor. It promotes women as equal participants and beneficiaries of sustainable development, peace and security, governance and human rights. It strives to stimulate the mainstreaming of a gender perspective both within and outside the United Nations system.

UNDP

Since 1990, the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) has annually published a Human Development Report which contains the Human Development Index (HDI). The HDI attempts to measure the relative socio-economic progress of nations.

Human Development Report 2001 looks at human rights as an intrinsic part of development—and at development as a means to realizing human rights. It shows how human rights bring principles of accountability and social justice to the process of human development.

UNICEF

The Children's Summit, held in New York in 1990, yielded an impressive action programme with very concrete objectives to improve the position of children in developing countries. UNICEF publishes annual reports on the progress made by each country in implementing the agreements.

The report The State of the World's Children 2001 details the daily lives of parents and other caregivers who are striving – in the face of war, poverty and the HIV/AIDS epidemic – to protect the rights and meet the needs of these young children. The report can be requested from:

UNICEF House

It also can be accessed on-line at:

<http://www.unicef.org/sowc01/>

UNICEF also publishes a yearly report named: The Progress of Nations, which ranks the nations of the world according to their performance in child health, nutrition, education, family planning, and progress for women.

UNIFEM

UNIFEM promotes women's empowerment and gender equality. It works to ensure the participation of women in all levels of development planning and practice, and acts as a catalyst within the UN system, supporting efforts that link the needs and concerns of women to all critical issues on the national, regional and global agendas.

WORLD BANK

The World Bank publishes annually its World Development Report.

According to the World Bank's latest World Development Report 2000/2001: Attacking Poverty major reductions in poverty are possible but achieving these will require a more comprehensive approach that directly addresses the needs of poor people in three important areas: opportunity, empowerment, and security.

The new study - the World Bank's most detailed ever investigation of global poverty - adds that economic growth is crucial but often not sufficient to create conditions in which the world's poorest people can improve their lives.

SAPRIN is a worldwide network of civil society organizations challenging the imposition of structural adjustment programs (SAPs). The Network is working with citizens' groups in 12-15 countries to organize public processes to determine the real impact of World Bank-and IMF-supported economic-reform programs and to chart a new course for the future. It is collaborating with the Bank and governments in 8-10 countries (SAPRI) and with parliamentarians and various institutions elsewhere. The Network contends that structural adjustment programs have had disastrous consequences for the large majority of citizens in the 80-plus countries in which they have been implemented.

WorldWatch Institute is a nonprofit public policy research organization dedicated to informing policymakers and the general public about emerging global problems and trends, and the complex links between the world economy and its environmental support systems. It publishes The State of the World 2001.

From the thinning of the Arctic sea ice to the invasion of the mosquito-borne West Nile virus, State of the World 2001 shows how the economic boom of the last decade has damaged natural systems. The increasingly visible evidence of environmental deterioration is only the tip of a much more dangerous problem: the growing inequities in wealth and income between countries within countries, inequities that will generate enormous social unrest and pressure for change
